

Final Proposals: Mark Trudeau

Final Proposals: Mark Trudeau

Direct visibility and access from Willingdon

Oblique approach to institutions
Diagonal path leads to odd shaped building lots

Direct approach to Library

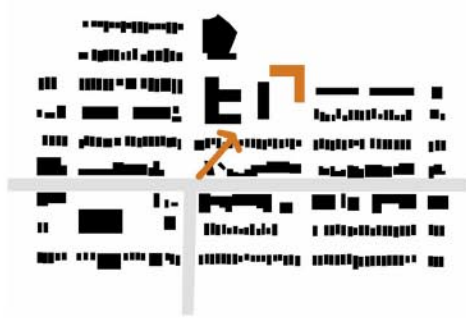

Close but not directly connected with Willingdon

Existing road is easily convertible to a pedestrian only route with minimal building changes

Approach does not bring people directly towards the institutions

Alternatives for accessing Burnaby Public Library from Hastings

Direct visibility and access from Willingdon

Oblique approach to institutions
Diagonal path leads to odd shaped building lots

Direct approach to Library

Close but not directly connected with Willingdon

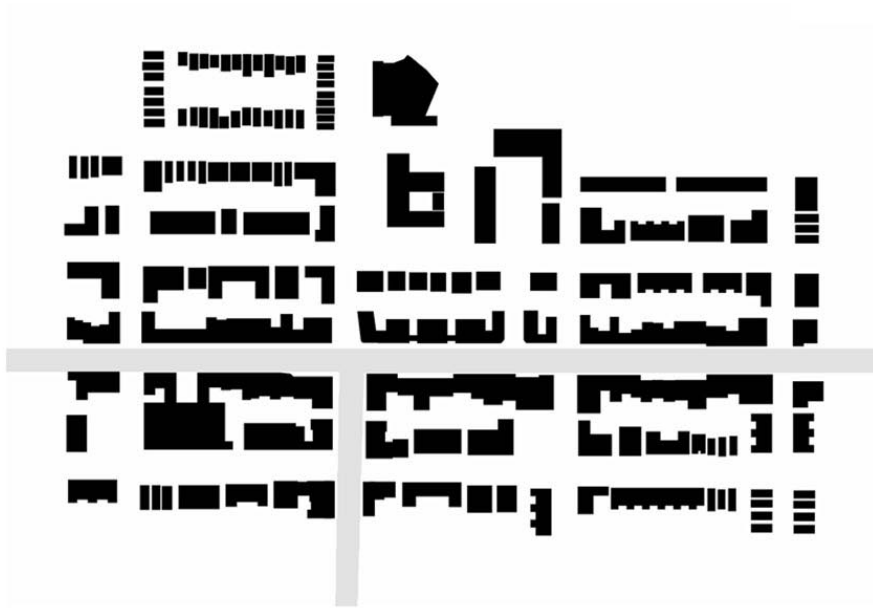

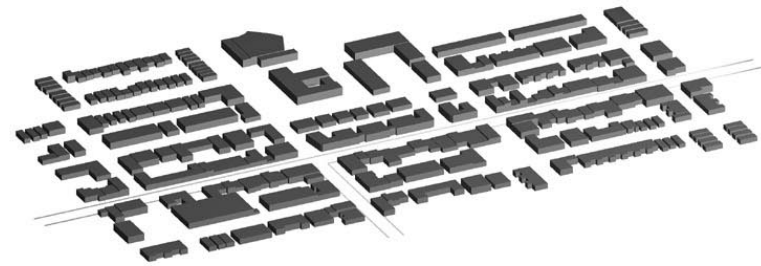

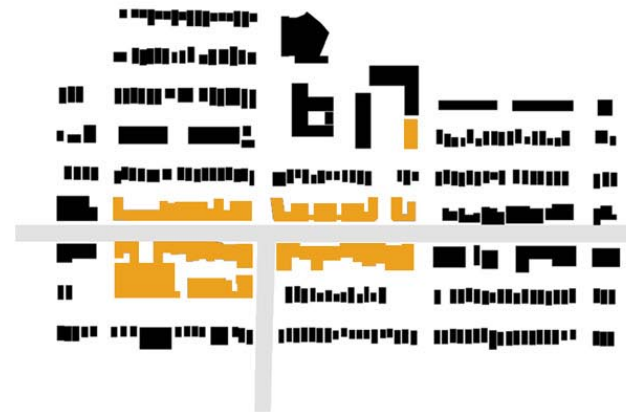

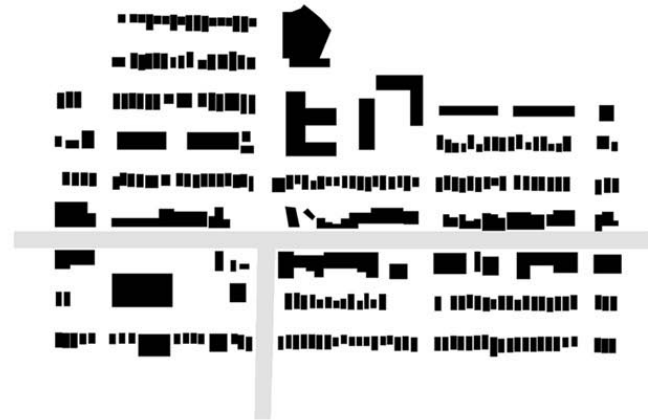

Existing road is easily convertible to a pedestrian only route with minimal building changes

Approach does not bring people directly towards the institutions

Alternatives for accessing Burnaby Public Library from Hastings

Direct pedestrian access is established from Hastings to the Burnaby Public Library. A pedestrian only area is also created with existing parking being removed from the interior of the institutional zone. These strategies are intended to reclaim land around the existing institutions to make them more approachable for people walking from Hastings.

Proposed Solid-Void

Direct pedestrian access is established from Hastings to the Burnaby Public Library. A pedestrian only area is also created with existing parking being removed from the interior of the institutional zone. These strategies are intended to reclaim land around the existing institutions to make them more approachable for people walking from Hastings.

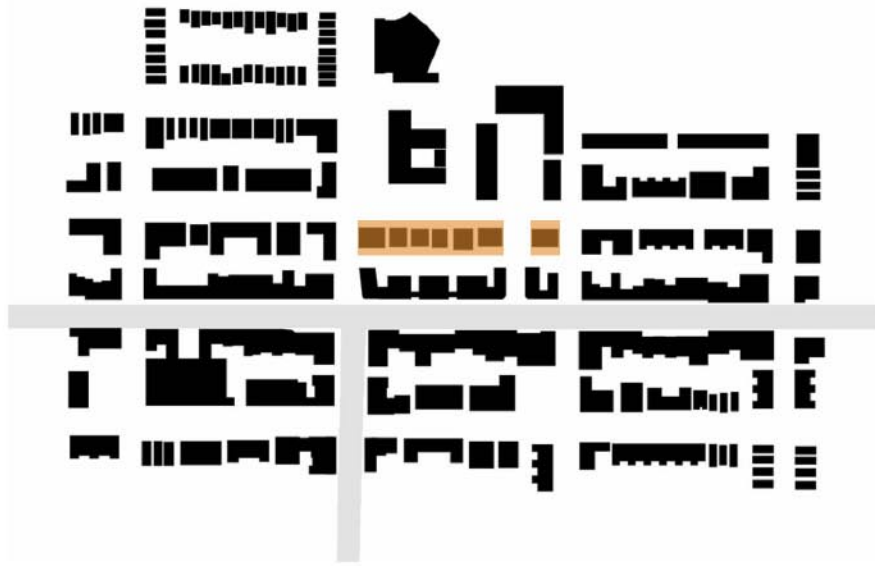

Proposed Solid-Void

Existing houses fronting the institutional zone will transition from single family housing into seniors club houses, medical clinics, counselling centres, and other service providing buildings. These buildings need to adjust to the new atmosphere of the park, but maintain a residential character to contrast the larger institutions beyond.

Proposed Solid-Void

Final Proposals: Mark Trudeau